Editorial Review

About the Author

The author is Australian-born teacher and writer Dr Rosemary Westwell who lives in Cambridgeshire, England. She moved to the UK in 1971. After a varied career with a number of different jobs, she finally settled with her British husband in Cambridgeshire, teaching in a number of different schools in the county. After the birth of the second child, her husband began to show signs of an illness that degenerated into dementia and he is now permanently in a care home. She has five university degrees (in music, the arts and education) and completed her PhD in 2007. She has two daughters and a growing number of grand children who live in the UK. The author gives lighthearted talks about her experiences as an Australian-born citizen establishing a new life in the UK and about her difficulties of learning Spanish after acquiring a flat in Spain. Her PhD thesis is available free on: <http://eprints.ioe.ac.uk/48/> Other publications: available on www.amazon.com: • 'Out of a Learner's Mouth', a humorous account of her language learning experiences in Spain. • 'Teaching Language Learners', a book of suggestions and ideas for teaching languages, especially English. • 'Twenty Tips for Teaching IGCSE ESL', a book of ideas and suggestions for teaching English as a Foreign or Second Language. • 'The Spelling Game', a book of ideas for teaching spelling. She has also written 'John, Dementia and Me', a semi-autobiographical novel based on the true story of her husband's decline with dementia, available on www.northstaffordshirepress.com and from August 2014, on www.amazon.com 'Spontaneous Survival Lessons in English' and 'Activities to Engage with The Woman in White and The Lady in the Lake' are available on <http://zigzageducation.co.uk>
